Some suggested targets are:

£15 could pay for a day's supply of DNA sequencing services, helping find genetic mistakes and improve treatments for children born without an immune system.

£40 could pay for one night's stay in nearby family accommodation so parents can stay close by while their child is in hospital.

£130 could pay for everything a play team member needs for one day. Through play, these GOSH superheroes ensure children feel in control, calm, informed about what's happening, and most importantly, able to be children.

£200 could pay for a clever bunny toy that helps the play team explain medical procedures, like blood tests and intravenous drips, through play. These toys help prepare children for procedures, build their confidence and ease any anxieties.
